Officers Club win for C24

Retail Specialist Officers Club selects C24 to handle the hosting and management of its critical business applications for its 115 shops based around the UK.

November 2009 – Officers Club is a leading men’s fashion retailer based throughout the UK with 110 stores nationwide and growing has announced that C24; the hosting and application delivery specialist, has won its account to host its mission critical applications that serve its 115 retail outlets across the UK.

The solution provided by C24 will be delivered from its tier 4 data centre and includes full systems hosting, back-up and 24 hour support for certain critical pieces of infrastructure. Through partnering with C24 Officers Club found that could they be confident that business-critical applications and services were being monitored and supported 24/7. They also found in C24 a partner with the experience and ethos to bring their IT projects in successfully - on-time and within budget.

Paul Hemming, Managing Director commented that “the relationship between C24 and The Officers Club has gone from strength to strength and the C24 team were delighted with this win as it proves that the strategy of being a specialist in application delivery is correct”.

Davey Dixon, IT Manager for The Officers Club, comments:

"C24 were extremely thorough with their planning of our server migration, leaving nothing to chance, which was very reassuring, and I have complete confidence in their ability to safely manage and host our servers. They have a supremely professional attitude and their enthusiasm for the task is infectious. They have also extended themselves beyond the remit of merely hosting our servers, giving us help and advice in planning the next stage of our application development. Needless to say that their physical hosting facilities are first class, with resilience and security being key to the design of the premises. We certainly look forward to a long and happy partnership."
